Cordially invite you to the

2009 Balzan Forum in New York

A conversation with Balzan Prize Winners

Monday, November 9, 2009  5:30 - 7:30 pm

Enrico Bombieri
Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton
1980 Balzan Prize Winner for Mathematics

Wallace S. Broecker
Columbia University
2008 Balzan Prize Winner for the Science of Climate Change

Thomas Nagel
New York University
2008 Balzan Prize Winner for Moral Philosophy

Light refreshments to follow

Columbia University
The Italian Academy for Advanced Studies
1161 Amsterdam Ave. (just south of 118th Street)
New York, N.Y. 10027

Please R.S.V.P. by November 5 to nb2413@columbia.edu

The Balzan Foundation is international in character and scope. It acts through two Foundations, one under Italian law and the other under Swiss law. It awards annual monetary prizes in two general fields: in literature, the moral sciences and the arts; and in medicine and the physical, mathematical and natural sciences. Since 2001, prize winners have been obliged to dedicate half of their awards to research projects by humanists or scientists (preferably young scholars). The Foundation was established to honour the memory of journalist Eugenio Balzan (Badia Polesine, Italy, 1874 - Lugano, Switzerland, 1953). The specific fields in which prizes are awarded are newly designated each year.