

The direct detection of gravitational waves, for which the Nobel prize has been awarded in 2017, has opened unprecedented opportunities for identifying the nature of the mysterious dark matter that permeates the universe on all scales. My research as an Italian Academy fellow explores new strategies to search for dark matter with gravitational waves, leveraging in particular new opportunities arising from machine learning.